

Here is the law itself, and let me sum it up for you because I know you're busy 😊
<https://le.utah.gov/~2018/bills/static/HB0181.html>

The idea is that as long as someone is selling food directly to the consumer, the consumer can ask questions, tour the facilities, etc to decide if they think it is safe and want to eat it. Farmers' markets count as selling it directly to the consumer, restaurants do not. There are no permits or inspections required. The only rules are:

- * The food must be produced & sold in utah
- * sold directly to the consumer
- * for home consumption
- * the food must have very specific labelling
- * the seller has to let the consumer know that the food is not certified, licensed, regulated or inspected.
- * not included: meat, raw dairy

I'm thrilled with this new legislation, and would love to help it be more widely known and accepted here in the basin. Let me know if there's anything I can do to help!
